WASHINGTON, D. C., March 6.—The cabinet are all confirmed.

After reading the journal Van Wyck was recognized, and offered the following resolution for which he asked immediate consideration:

RESOLVED, That the secretary of the interior be directed to inform the senate whether patents have been issued for lands granted in 1871 to the New Orleans, Baton Rouge and Vicksburg, popularly known as the Backbone railroad. If so, for what number of acres, to what corporation or individuals, whose receipt was taken for the same; when signed; whether unusual means were used to hasten preparation and execution of said patents; whether the clerical force employed worked at nights and Sundays so they might be completed before March 4; what day they were ready for the signature of the president; what necessity existed for any special exertion to secure the completion and signature before the fourth day of March, and whether anything was done to protect the actual settlers in their rights to any such lands. Also whether previous to the fourth of March anything was done or written in regard to any other unearned land grants forfeiture which had been assigned by the forty-eighth congress. Edmunds objected to present consideration and under the rules the matter went over for a day.

How laid before the senate a letter he had received from the president of the Union Pacific railway, which he asked might be printed for information.

The following confirmations were then made:

Secretary of state, Thomas F. Bayard, of Delaware.

Secretary of the treasury, Daniel Manning, of New York.

Secretary of war, William C. Endicott, of Massachusetts.

Secretary of the navy, William C. Whitney, of New York.

Secretary of the interior, L. Q. C. Lamar, of Mississippi.

Post master general, William F. Vilas, of Wisconsin.

Attorney general, A. H. Garland, of Arkansas.

The New President.

By Telegraph to THE SENTINEL.

WASHINGTON, March 6.—The first official act of President Cleveland was the nomination of his cabinet; his second was to offer his signature to the commission of U. S. Grant as an officer on the retired list of the army with the rank of general.

The crowd of callers at the white house to-day was even greater than that of yesterday. They began to arrive before the doors opened and continued coming in large numbers all day. The president received some of them in the library and others in the east room, just as it happened to be convenient. This arrangement kept him busy running up and down the stairs. The majority of the callers consisted of delegations from the different states. Among them were the following: Virginia headed by Representatives Barbour and Wise; West Virginia, headed by Senator Camden and Kennett; Iowa, headed by Representative Fuzy; Missouri, two delegations, one headed by Representative Bland, the other by Representative-elect Head; Alabama, with Representative Wheeler; Michigan, with Representative Maybury; Illinois, with Representative Springer; New York, with Representative Hiscock; New Jersey, with Representative Brewster; Louisiana, with Representative Blanchard.

The members of the national democratic committee also called in a body. Among other callers were Attorney General Garland, Senator Jones, Gen. Jas. E. Johnston, Wash. McLean, Attorney General O'Brien, of New York, Silas H. Burd, of New York, Ex-Senator Herford, Representatives Turner and McAdoo, General Hancock and General Farnsworth. The president to-day accepted the resignation of Mr. Arthur's cabinet and signed the commissions of the new cabinet officers. They will probably enter on the discharge of their duties to-morrow.

He Was Not a Skating "Professor."

By Telegraph to THE SENTINEL.

CLEVELAND, March 6.—An attempt was made last night to assassinate Prof. A. J. Esch, superintendent of Gorman in the public schools. Some time ago a huckster named George Street drove his wagon against Esch's sleigh damaging it badly. Street refused to settle the damages and Esch had him arrested. He paid the fine in police court and it was thought settled. Last evening Street called at Esch's house and after a short conversation drew a large revolver from his pocket saying he would shoot Esch. A fierce struggle ensued and Esch finally obtained possession of the weapon. Every chamber of which was loaded. Street was under the influence of liquor and Esch permitted him to go.

LONDON, March 5.—The commons voted 330,000 pounds sterling for extra naval expenses for the construction of ironclads.

In the commons this afternoon Gladstone said, public policy forbade his answering questions respecting the Russo-Afghan frontier difficulty.

The Marquis of Harlington announced that the government intended to increase the strength of the army.

The Berlin correspondent of the Times, in a long letter, attacks Bismarck for indirection, deceit and deliberate falsehood in his dealings with England, in regard to Germany's course in South Africa.

Americans Arrested.

By Telegraph to THE SENTINEL.

PANAMA, February 24.—Two Americans were among the foreigners arrested on the United States steamer Wachusett, which had been in Guyana-put where the conferences were held between President Cosmeano, her captain, and vice-Consul Reinberg. The Ecuadorian authorities claim that Santos is an Ecuadorian citizen and deny that his naturalization papers from the United States should protect him. The Wachusett has gone to Manta to open communication with Santos who is in jail in an interior village. She will then go to Baltra and inquire into the manner in which United States vice Consul Goddard was treated and why Mr. Constantine, an American resident in the port, was deprived of his goods by order of the military salaray after Flores' chief offender had left.

Wednesday noon, March 4, 1885.

It is a matter of deep regret that the grave suspicions entertained of the serious nature of General Grant were misunderstood. This disease we name, which now perhaps has been heard of by the general public for the first time, assumes importance as to study, which it could never otherwise obtain; consequently the daily papers are educating the people with regard to it. So the terms epitheloma, malignancy and infiltration will be as well understood as in former times were—those of suppuration, pus-trak and bullet-cysts. As might have been anticipated under the circumstances, the published reports of the general's condition was very much exaggerated. The disease is by no means as extensive as is generally believed. In fact, the ulcerations are small in extent and limited to the right pillar of the fauces anterior. The one being perforated at its base, adjoining the right side root of the tongue is indurated to a slight extent, as is also the neighboring gland under the angle of the jaw, on the right side of the neck. The root of the mouth along the line is a hard palate, and to the right of the median line contains three small warty-like excretions, which show a tendency toward the cell proliferation. The epiglottis is free from any abnormality as are all the other parts of the throat, although in the duration of the tongue there has existed more or less since last fall, when the patient was first seen by Dr. Douglas. The ulcerations have appeared quite recently. It was during their progress that the general suffered from pain in the right ear, which has never been entirely relieved by local application of four per cent solution of cocaine. The pain in the degliteration is now entirely controlled and the patient is kept in a very comfortable state. The pulse, which is nominally 60, occasionally reaches 80 beats. His bodily temperature is normal; appetite fair, which is saying everything in its favor as the general is not a hearty eater. His bodily condition is, however, much below par and is more to be considered at present than the local disease. The treatment of the case has been judiciously conservative from the start. Fluid extract of cocaine administered internally and iodiform is dusted upon the ulceration. Contrary to the general impression the tooth itself is not ulcerated. The troublesome tooth said to have been extracted for relief from pain was on the opposite side of the mouth and was removed to relieve the persistent ache of the left ear.

FRIDAY, MARCH 6, 1885.

THE CITY.

A daughter of Deputy Marshal Limey is ill.

Travel is increasing considerable on the different railroads now.

Shuman's new skating rink, on the second floor, was opened last night with some aplomb.

Passenger Conductor Baldwin, of the Wabash, was for eighteen years a locomotive engineer.

Constable John Robbins yesterday arrested Jennie Lee, a girl of ill repute. Justice France fined the woman $27. She will have to pay or stay proceedings.

Sheriff Nelson and Surveyor O. B. Wiley went to Springfield township this morning. Mr. Nelson is on legal business and Mr. Wiley will make a survey out there.

Innes, the celebrated trombonist, will be the guest of his business manager, Gart Shoer, next Sunday. The musician will tendered a reception at the City Band parlor.

Residence No. 127 Montgomery street was quite brilliantly decorated day before yesterday. The lady of the house is an ardent admirer of President Cleveland. Her husband, however, is a republican.

Eleven shares of the capital stock of the old Illinois Southern road (now the Cairo division of the Wabash) were sold recently in Mt. Carmel for the sum of five cents.

The Wabash people have just completed a very substantial iron bridge over Pogue's Run, at Indianapolis, widening the water way for the stream and giving it a clear course.

The Indianapolis, Peru and Chicago division of the Wabash system earned in the three months ending Dec. 31, 1884, $155,618.00; operating expenses, $185,457.10; surplus earnings $16,061.50.

City Treasurer Berghoff will keep his office open each evening hereafter until April 20, so that people who desire can pay their tax after working hours. This is a very courteous act on the part of Mr. Berghoff.

Contractor Siegfried Beverforde wishes The SENTINEL to bid good bye to such of his friends whom he did not see personally. He had been a resident of Fort Wayne for twenty years and was quite well to do.

An addition will be built to the Wabash hospital at Danville, Ill., as soon as the weather will permit, its present size not being adequate for the demands of the institution. Fort Wayne was promised a Wabash hospital, but it does not come to the front.

At the session of the Grand Council Royal Arcanum of Indiana, held at Indianapolis, John W. Vordermark was elected a member of the finance committee. Hon. Robert Stratton was regent of the council last year. He is succeeded by J. N. Bunyan, of Warsaw.

The remains of Case Thomas, who died at Pueblo, Col., last Saturday, were expressed to Fort Wayne yesterday.

The funeral will take place in Elkhorn township immediately after the arrival of the remains. The deceased is a brother of O. T. Thomas and Len Thomas, formerly typists on THE SENTINEL and News.

S. G. Sullivan, a brakeman on the Wabash railway, while passing through Roanoke on a west bound freight train, was seriously injured by being struck on the head by the water tank sprout which is dangerously low. The conductor, who happened to be near, caught Mr. Sullivan and prevented his falling under the cars.

Country crop prophets insist that there will be a large yield of all kinds of grain the coming season. There has been some apprehension on the part of many that the wheat had been smothered by the great amount of snow which covered it during the winter, but that theory has been exploded, and all unite now in the opinion that the wheat is all right.

The Kendallville News says: "Paul G. Klinkenborg is the name of the new drug clerk employed by Mr. G. H. Lehman, and Paul appears to be a right young fellow. He is from Fort Wayne and has had experience as a druggist.—We met in Fort Wayne yesterday the Rev. Seymour Stanton, who is located at Maples, in Allen county. Mr. Stanton not only supplies the pulpit of his denomination at Maples, but also at New Haven."

The officers of the Grand Rapids road are as follows: President, W. O. Hougham; vice president, W. R. Shelby; secretary, J. H. P. Hougham; treasurer, W. R. Shelby; auditor, F. A. Gorham; superintendent northern division, J. M. McPherson; superintendent southern division, F. S. O'Rourke; general freight agent, C. E. Gill; general passenger agent, C. L. Lockwood; master mechanic, S. D. Bradley; purchasing agent, W. R. Shelly; paymaster, J. H. P. Hougham. C. A. Zollinger is a director of the company, representing the stock owned by this city.

Corn is plenty on the market now. The surplus is being disposed of.

Col. E. L. Chittenden is writing sketching rink poetry. His maiden effort will appear in THE SENTINEL.

Ed Leary, Michael Ward and Joe McManigal, common drunkards, were committed to jail to-day by Acting Mayor Ryan.

J. H. Smith & Co. will not purchase the Gansee Mower works. The people of Bluffton have made it an object for the firm to remain there.

The Indianapolis Journal says: "The family of Representative Lowry will go to their home at Fort Wayne to-morrow. Mr. Lowry will remain here some time."

Passenger Conductor Baldwin, of the Wabash, was for eighteen years a locomotive engineer.

Constable John Robbins yesterday arrested Jennie Lee, a girl of ill repute. Justice France fined the woman $27. She will have to pay or stay proceedings.

F. T. Zimmerman, of Auburn, is the guest of A. H. Bittner. Mr. Zimmerman is the manufacturer of the automatic wind mill. Two of the pumps have been purchased by J. H. Bass for service on his suburban farm.

Resident members of the 30th Indiana are requested to meet at the county clerk's office Thursday evening, March 10, at 7:30, to make arrangements for the coming regimental reunion. Willis D. Major, the secretary, requests the assembly.

The indications for the lower lake region, as reported by the weather bureau at Washington to THE SENTINEL, are as follows: Partly cloudy weather, local rains or snow, easterly shifting to southerly winds with slightly warmer weather, falling barometer.

Henry M. Gitt wrote Col. Henry W. Lawton, of the old 30th Indiana regiment, for the postoffice address of A. H. Layton and Joseph Knapp. Col. Lawton, who is now commanding United States troops in Arizona, refers the matter to W. D. Major.

Officer Singleton found Louis C. Bell and Minnie Hawes making love on the Nebraska bridge over the St. Mary's river. The couple were run in and paid $10 this morning for the luxury of pressing each other's lips where the waters of the classic St. Mary's steal along. River love, however, will not be popular hereafter.

Jennie Walker, the girl whom Mrs. Hollis Gillett hit with a beer glass a few days ago, was fined $26.75 by Acting Mayor Ryan this morning for prostitution. Rose Nelson, another frail creature, was fined $10.75. Both women had to go to jail, but as they are rather pretty and winsome admirers may come to the rescue.

Deputy Marshal Brandt arrested Charles Kerns for "shoving" counterfeit coin in liquor men. The crook was turned over to United States Marshal Hayden, and Commissioner J. B. Harper will bind him over to await trial in the United States court. Like Slater, he will be indicted at Indianapolis and tried here.

THE WABASH STRIKE.

The Sheppen Still Asserts a Bold Front to Await a Reply from Manager Talmage—The Situation To-day and the Circumstances of the Employers.

The Wabash shopmen, to the number of eighty, held two meetings to-day, one this morning and one this afternoon. The men ignore local authorities, and have forwarded their grievances to General Manager Talmage from whom a reply is awaited.

Master Mechanic Barnes this morning pulled down the notice agreeing to pay as good wages as the Pittsburgh shopmen get. He says the men can return to work, but if they don't he will have a hundred new men at work on Monday. About twenty-five men are at work today in the shops, and the strikers do not molest them. They simply say, "Come and help us."

The idle workmen last night promulgated the following circular which explains itself:

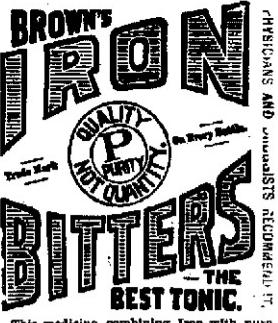

CIRCULAR ADDRESS.

Issued by the employees of the Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific railway company at Fort Wayne, Ind:

FORT WAYNE, INDIANA

March 5th, 1885.

The employees of the Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific Railway Company, by the executive committee do issue this circular:

LOVE OR MONEY.

The Best Story of the Season.

"Monckton," said Colonel Clifford, "that is not his name. It is Meredith. He is a clergyman." Bartley examined him very suspiciously, and Monckton, during this examination, looked perfectly calm and innocent. Meantime a note was brought to Colonel Clifford, from Grace: "Papa was the witness. He is quite sure the bridegroom was not our Walter. He thinks it must have been the other clerk, Leonard Monckton, who robbed Mr. Bartley, and put some of the money into dear Walter's pockets to ruin him, but papa saved him. Don't let him escape."

Colonel Clifford's eye flashed with triumph, but he controlled himself.

"Say I will give it due attention," said he. "I'm busy now."

And the servant retired.

"Now, sir," said he, "is this a case of mistaken identity, or is your name Leonard Monckton?"

"Colonel Clifford," said the hypocrite, sadly, "I little thought that I should be made to suffer for the past, since I came here only on an errand of mercy. Yes, sir, in my unregenerate days I was Leonard Monckton. I disgraced the name. But I repented, and when I adopted the sacred calling of a clergyman I parted with the past, name and all. I was that man's clerk; and so, said he, spitefully, and forgetting his sing-song, "was your son Walter Clifford. Was that not so, Mr. Bartley?"

"Don't speak to me, sir," said Bartley. "I shall say nothing to gratify you nor to affront Colonel Clifford."

"Speak the truth, sir," said Colonel Clifford; "never mind the consequences."

"Well, then," said Bartley, very unwillingly, "they were clerks in my office, and this one robbed me."

"One thing at a time," said Monckton. "Did I rob you of twenty thousand pounds, as you robbed Mr. Walter Clifford?"

His voice became still more incisive, and the curtain of the little room opened a little and two eyes of fire looked in.

"Do you remember one fine day your clerk, Walter Clifford, asking you for leave of absence to be married?"

Bartley turned his back on him contemptuously.

But Colonel Clifford insisted on his replying.

"Yes, he did," said Bartley, sullenly. "But," said the Colonel, quietly, "he thought better of it, and so—you married her yourself."

This bayonet thrust was so keen and sudden that the villain's self-possession left him for once. His mouth opened in dismay, and his eyes, roving to and fro, seemed to seek a door to escape.

But there was worse in store for him. The curtains were drawn right and left with power, and there stood Grace Clifford, beautiful, pale and terrible. She marched toward him with eyes that rooted him to the spot, and then she stopped.

"Now hear me, for he has tortured me, and tried to kill me. Look at his white face turning ghastly beneath his paint at the sight of me; look at his thin lips, and his devilish eyebrows, and his restless eyes. This is the man that bribed that wretch to fire the mine!"

These last words, ringing from her lips like the trumpet of doom, were unanswered, as swiftly as gunpowder explodes at a lighted touch, by a furious yell, and in a moment the room seemed a forest of wild beasts. A score of raging miners came upon him from every side, dragging, tearing, beating, kicking, cursing, yelling. He was down in a moment, then soon up again, then dragged out of the room, nails, fists, and heavy boots all going, stripped to the shirt, screaming like a woman. A dozen assailants rolled down the steps, with him in the midst of them. He got clear for a moment, but twenty more rushed at him, and again he was torn and battered and kicked. "Police! police!" he cried; and at last the detectives who came to seize him rushed in, and Colonel Clifford, too, with the voice of a stentor, cried, "The law! Respect the law, or you are ruined men."

And so at last the law he had so dreaded raised what seemed a bag of bones; nothing left on him but one boot and fragments of a shirt, ghastly, bleeding, covered with bruises, insensible, and to all appearance dead.

After a short consultation, they carried him, by Colonel Clifford's order, to the Dun Cow, where Lucy, it may be remembered, was awaiting his triumphant return.

CHAPTER XXVI. STRANGE TURNS.

And yet this catastrophe rose out of a mistake. When the detective asked Jem Davies to watch the lawn, he never suspected that the clergyman was the villain who had been concerned in that explosion. But Davies, a man of few ideas and full of his own wrong, took for granted, as such minds will, that the policeman would not have spoken to him if this had not been his affair; so he and his fellows gathered about the steps and watched the drawing-room. They caught a glimpse of Monckton, but that only puzzled them. His appearance was inconsistent with the only description they had got—in fact opposed to it. It was Grace Clifford's denunciation, trumpet-tongued, that let loose savage justice on the villain. Never was a woman's voice so fatal, or so swift to slay. She would have undone her work. The fury she had launched she could not recall. As for Bartley, words can hardly describe his abject terror. He crouched, he shivered, he moaned, he almost swooned; and long after it was all over he was found crouched in a corner of the little room, and his very reason appeared to be shaken. Judge Lynch had passed him, but too near. The freezing shadow of Retribution chilled him.

Colonel Clifford looked at him with contemptuous pity, and sent him home with John Baker in a close carriage.

Lucy Monckton was in the parlor of the Dun Cow waiting for her master. The detectives and some out-door servants of Clifford Hall brought a short ladder and pallasades, and something covered with blankets, to the door. Lucy saw, but did not suspect the truth.

They had a murmured consultation with the landlady. During this Mark Waddy came down, and there was some more whispering, and soon the battered body was taken up to Mark Waddy's room and deposited on his bed. The detectives retired to consult, and Waddy had to break the calamity to Mrs. Monckton. He did this as well as he could; but it little matters how such blows are struck. Her agony was great, and greater when she saw him, for she resisted entirely all attempts to keep her from him. She installed herself at once as his nurse, and Mark addy retired to a garret.

A surgeon came by Colonel Clifford's order and examined Monckton's bruised body, and shook his head. He reported that there were no bones broken, but there were probably grave internal injuries. These, however, he could not specify at present, since there was no sensibility in the body; so pressure on the injured parts elicited no groans. He prescribed egg and brandy in small quantities, and showed Mrs. Monckton how to administer it to a patient in that desperate condition.

His last word was in private to Waddy. "If he ever speaks again, or even groans aloud, send for me. Otherwise—" and he shrugged his shoulders.

Some hours afterward, Colonel Clifford called as a magistrate to see if the suffer had any deposition to make. But he was mute, and his eyes fixed.

As Colonel Clifford returned, one of the detectives accosted him and asked him for a warrant to arrest him.

"Not in his present condition," said Colonel Clifford, rather superciliously. "And pray, sir, why did you interfere sooner and prevent this lawless act?"

"Well, sir, unfortunately we were on the other side of the house."

"Exactly; you had orders to be in one place; you must be in another. See the consequence. The honest men have put themselves in the wrong, and this fellow in the right. He will die a sort of victim, with his guilt suspected only, not proved."

Having thus snubbed the Force, the old soldier turned his back on them and went home, where Grace met him, all anxiety, and received his report. She implored him not to proceed any further against the man, and declared she should fly the country rather than go into a court of law as witness against him.

"Humph!" said the Colonel; "but you are the only witness."

"All the better for him," said she; "then he will die in peace. My tongue has killed the man once; it shall never kill him again."

About six next morning Monckton beckoned Lucy. She came eagerly to him; he whispered to her. "Can you keep a secret?"

"You know I can," said she. "Then never let any one know I have spoken."

"No, dear, never. Why?"

"I dread the law more than death," he shuddered all over. "Save me from the law."

"Leonard, I will," said she. "Leave that to me."

She wired for Mr. Middleton as soon as possible.

The next day there was no change in the patient. He never spoke to anybody, except a word or two to Lucy, in a whisper, when they were quite alone.

In the afternoon down came Lawyer Middleton. Lucy told him what he knew, but Monckton would not speak, even to him. He had to get hold of Waddy before he understood the whole case.

Waddy was in Monckton's secret, and, indeed, in everybody's. He knew it was folly to deceive your lawyer, so he was frank. Mr. Middleton learned his client's guilt and danger, but also that his enemies had flaws in their armor.

The first shot he fired was to get warrants out against a dozen miners. Jem Davies included, for a murderous assault; but he made no arrests, he only summoned. So one or two took flight and fled. Middleton had counted on that, and it made the case worse for those that remained. Then, by means of friends in Derby, he worked the Press.

An article appeared headed, "Our Savages." It related with righteous indignation how Mr. Bartley's miners had burned the dead body of a miner suspected of having fired the mine, and put his own life in jeopardy as well as those of others; and then, not content with that monstrous act, had fallen upon and beaten to death a gentleman in whom they thought they detected a resemblance to some person who had been, or was suspected of being that miner's accomplice; "but so far from that," said the writer, "we are now informed, on sure authority, that the gentleman in question is a large and wealthy landed proprietor, quite beyond any temptation to crime or dishonesty, and had actually visited this part of the world only in the character of a peacemaker, and to discharge a very delicate commission, which it would not be our business to publish, even if the details had been confided to us."

The article concluded with a hope that these monsters "would be taught that even if they were below the standard of humanity they were not above the law."

Middleton attended the summons, gave his name and address, and informed the magistrate that his client was a large landed proprietor, and it looked like a case of mistaken identity. His client was actually dying of his injuries, but his wife hoped for justice.

But the detectives had taken care to be present, and so they put in their word. They said that they were prepared to prove, at a proper time, that the wounded man was really the person who had been heard by Mrs. Walter Clifford to bribe Ben Burnley to fire the mine.

"We have nothing to do with that now," said the magistrate. "One thing at a time, please. I cannot let these people murder a convicted felon, far less a suspected criminal that has not been tried. The wounded man proceeds according to law, through a respectable attorney. These men, whom you are virtually defending, have taken the law into their own hands. Are your witnesses here, Mr. Middleton?"

"Not at present, and when I was interrupted, I was about to ask your worship to grant me an adjournment for that purpose. It will not be a great hardship to the accused, since we proceed by summons. I fear I have been too lenient, for two or three of them have absconded since the summons was served."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

"I am not surprised at that," said the magistrate; "however, you know your own business."

Then the police applied for a warrant of arrest against Monckton.

"Oh!" cried Middleton, with the air of a man thoroughly shocked and scandalized.

"Certainly not," said the magistrate; "I shall not disturb the course of justice; there is not even an ex parte case against this gentleman at present. Such an application must be supported by a witness, and a disinterested one." So all the parties retired crest-fallen except Mr. Middleton; as for him, he was imitating a small but ingenious specimen of nature—the cuttle-fish. This little creature, when pursued by its enemies, discharges an inky fluid which obscures the water all around, and then it starts off and escapes.

One dark night, at two o'clock in the morning, there came to the door of the Dun Cow an invalid carriage, or rather omnibus, with a spring-filled and every convenience. The wheels were covered thick with India-rubber.

FOR LIFE.

Fred Richards sentenced to the Penitentiary by Judge O'Rourke this afternoon.

The attorneys for Fred Richards argued the motion for a new trial for the murderer before Hon. Edward O'Rourke this afternoon. Mr. Henry Colerick opposed the issue, for the state, and Judge O'Rourke denied the prisoner a third trial. Richards then stood up and was committed to the prison north for the remainder of his life. Richards protested his innocence and left the court muttering vengeance. He dropped his head and was the picture of despair. His counsel may appeal the case. He will be taken to prison next week.
